

- home
- subscribe
- classifieds
- news
- sports
- opinions
- religion
- obituaries
- regio

Search Archives

Advanced Search

Extras

- Announcements
- Legal Center
- Stock Market
- Contact Us
- About Pine Bluff
- Quick Links
- Razorback Central

Advertisers

State News

Freezing rain brings closures in north Arkansas

200-pound chunk of limestone falls from Arkansas Capitol

Man's death ruled not natural causes, police investigate homicide

Trial to decide fate of art collection wraps; judgement later

Ark. court

State News

Ark. court says customer can collect bonds from payday lenders

By ANDREW DeMILLO
Thursday, February 21, 2008 2:45 PM CST

LITTLE ROCK - For the second time in two months, Arkansas' highest court on Thursday ruled that a customer can collect the surety bond from a payday lender accused of violating the state Constitution by charging more than 17 percent a year to borrow money.

Justices reversed and dismissed a Pulaski County Circuit Court's ruling that Emma Staton was not entitled to $200,000 in surety bonds issued by American Manufacturers Mutual Insurance Company. The bonds were issued to Kentucky Cash Connection, which operated the Americash payday lending firms in Arkansas.

Staton sued the payday lenders in 2001 and accused the company of violating state law by charging more than 17 percent interest. A judge ruled in her favor and awarded Staton $834,000 and $50,000 for attorneys' fees.

Unable to collect the judgment, Staton sued American, which had posted four $50,000 surety bonds for the payday lenders, but a Pulaski County judge ruled that Staton's loss was not covered by the bonds. She appealed to the Supreme Court, but justices said she did not exhaust her administrative remedies by appealing to the state Board of Collection Agencies.

The board in 2005 found that Staton did not find any evidence that Americash violated the Check Casher Act, so she was not entitled to the bond money. A Pulaski County judge upheld the board's ruling in 2006.

In an unanimous ruling, justices said that the 2001 ruling showed that Americash violated the board's own regulations barring deceptive trade practices in addition to the state Constitution prohibiting charging high interest rates.

"To require the consent judgment to state such a specific finding is untenable, particularly when the Board is presumed to be aware of its own regulations, including Regulation XXI that prohibits check cashers from engaging in deceptive trade practices," Justice Donald L. Corbin wrote in the court's ruling. "Accordingly, the Board's ruling that it could not make demand on the bonds because Staton presented no evidence of a violation of the Act or a Board rule or regulation was arbitrary, capricious and an abuse of discretion."

The decision was nearly identical to a Supreme Court ruling last month affirming a lower court's order that a Russellville check casher forfeit a $50,000 surety bond it had with Old Republic Surety Company Inc. to operate in the state. The high court also ordered the state says customer can collect bonds from payday lenders

Board of Collection Agencies to rule in accordance with its opinion.

Another challenge to the state's regulation of payday lenders could also wind up before the court. Pulaski County Judge Barry Sims has ruled the 1999 Check Cashers Act was constitutional, but the Supreme Court sent the case back to Sims without making a ruling on its merits.

Sims last year again ruled the law unconstitutional, and an appeal is expected before the Supreme Court.

- More State News

The Arkansas Check Cashers Act says a fee paid for holding a check written before the date it is to be cashed "shall not be deemed interest." Typically, someone wanting a payday loan goes to a check-cashing company and writes a check for a certain amount, and the company agrees not to cash the check for a specified time _ often waiting until the check-writer's payday, when money can be deposited to cover the amount of the check.

Through a payday loan in Arkansas, a customer writing a check for $400, for example, typically would receive $350. The lender would keep the check for about two weeks without cashing it and, thereby, allowing the customer time to buy back the check.

The $50 charge on the $350 loan for 14 days equates to 371 percent interest, well above Arkansas' usury limit of 17 percent.

A service of the Associated Press(AP)

Print this story | Email this story

 TROTTER  TOYOTA	3010 Auto Mall Drive                  Across from Pines Mall                  534-7521 • 1-800-467-3673                  www.trottertoyota.com	 TROTTER FORD MERCURY LINCOLN	3131 Olive                  Pine Bluff                  535-4321 • 1-800-467-367                  www.trotterford.com Click Here
--	---	---	---

home :: news :: sports :: opinions :: classifieds :: obituaries :: region :: archives :: subscribe :: ei

Copyright © 2008 Stephens Media, LLC